If it's Wednesday, it must be Revolutionary War day. Jack and Annie, stars of the Magic Tree House series, are in for another adventure in their time- and space-traveling tree house. Mysterious magical librarian Morgan le Fay has set four new tasks for the siblings. Jack and Annie must find four special kinds of writing for Morgan's library in order to save Camelot, the ancient kingdom of King Arthur. In Civil War on Sunday, the pair traveled back to the 1860s to collect a list of rules ("something to follow") from famous nurse Clara Barton. Now they discover they must visit another war era: the Revolutionary War. Jack and Annie set aside their apprehension and soon they're spinning back through time to Christmas Day, 1776, on the banks of the Delaware River in Pennsylvania, where they encounter none other than the man on the dollar bill himself, George Washington! The children accidentally-on-purpose end up embroiled in the famous commander-in-chief's mission, where they not only play a part in convincing Washington to carry on with his patriotic duty, but also find the second kind of writing for Morgan's library: "something to send." Award-winning author Mary Pope Osborne's young adventure series, The Magic Tree House, is immensely popular among children and teachers alike, promoting a fascination with history--and reading--no textbook can match. (Ages 6 to 9) --Emilie Coulter

The Magic Tree House whisks Jack and Annie back to Colonial America. They arrive just as General George Washington is planning the crossing of the Delaware. Before they know it, Jack and Annie are in a boat with the Father of Our Country as history is made!

I bought this for my grandson. These books are easy to read for new readers. He was playing video games and they started reading this book series (Magic Tree House) in school. I was doing genealogy work on my family and discovered my 4 times Great-Grandfather was in the militia or German Regiment all of the war and before that, so I was able to set up a frame of reference for this book! We read it together.

I bought a class set of these and, on our first use, most started coming apart at the bottom part of the seam. It's disheartening because I doubt I'll be able to use them more than once or twice.

I bought this for my girlfriend's son because I got tired of he and his older sister not knowing anything about history. I figured that I would start him off with the Magic Tree House books because I have read some other books in this series and he loves them. He ended up loving this book and the companion book so much that I am now on the lookout for more books like this. Thank you Mary Pope Osborne for helping me to help the kids learn about history in a really fun way.

This is a nice book for 3rd-5th grades. It is easy to read and covers some historical facts. This is part of a series of books that my grandchildren enjoy. People who want to encourage reading in their children and/or grandchildren will find these books a good series of books that help.

My boys find these historical fiction books interesting to read. They ask lots of questions about what the historical event was really about after reading them. Easy chapter books to start on and gets them into reading and history.

It was okay but not the strongest storyline.

My grandson loved this book. He has really been excited to learn about George Washington since we visited the Washington monument and this was the perfect story for him. He loves all the magic treehouse books!

A very good book, very short but lots and lots of details in this book, I very much liked this book
