Customer Reviews

Many of us have heard stories about reptiles surfacing in toilets or a young couple narrowly escaping attack by an escaped convict with a hook for a hand. De Vos offers a scholarly yet entertaining compendium of these and other contemporary legends of special interest to young adults. It describes the basic structure and features of the legends, as well as their role in the world around us. Of particular interest is the section in each chapter listing literary and visual adaptations of legends mentioned, including books by Alvin Schwartz and Stephen King. An appendix of classroom discussion topics is noteworthy, as are the indices of legends, their subjects, and literary works mentioned in the text. This title would be useful for libraries serving young adults or for those researching folklore or storytelling.
