Freda DeKnight was the Home Service Director for Johnson Publishing Company and author of Ebony magazine's monthly column, "A Date with a Dish."

I purchased this book after it was recommended by my chef. I have not been disappointed. It's simple food from a simpler time. The book was written in 1962. Don't expect to see quinoa, do expect maple cake, split pea soup (yum) and buttermilk pie.

This is a really delightful book. The only thing that would make it better would be if it were spiral bound to stay open while cooking. Yum!

Verry good southern recipes. I can't wait to try them

Love this book.

I looked at some of recipes they look very tasty and simple meaning not a lot of ingredients and just four or five steps.

I like to experiment with different types of recipes. Having the opportunity to understand a different culture's food is wonderful. This book describes different foods that aren't necessarily soul foods. Here are black culture special dishes and everyday foods. I made the peanut butter turkey. And enjoyed it. Keep an eye on the salt. It can be more than needed.

Okay. Revised old cookbook.
