Criminological Theory: Past To Present: Essential Readings

Synopsis

Criminological Theory: Past to Present--Essential Readings is a comprehensive reader that exposes students to both classic and contemporary theories of crime. Editors Francis T. Cullen, Robert Agnew, and Pamela Wilcox provide accessible yet detailed introductions, preparing students for what they are about to read and placing each selection in context. The fifth edition includes a new Part XIV, entitled "Paying Attention to Race: Theoretical Developments," and new readings covering biology and crime, defensible space, decision-making by criminals, environmental corrections, and the relationship between race, racism, and crime.

Customer Reviews

"The approach of the book is cross-disciplinary, comprehensive, and historically based. It is the best out there."--Sharon C. Ostrow, Temple University

"If you want to enrich [this course] for your criminological theory students, adopt this book."--Judith Kirwan Kelley, Curry College

"Criminological Theory is an excellent compendium of selections by many of the major theorists in the discipline. It covers a wide range of theories both historically and conceptually."--Marvin D.

Krohn, University of Florida "Long a classic, Criminological Theory gets better with each new edition, none better than this one. The book is a must read for those concerned with the nature and effects of crime and social deviance. But I think it is just as important for all--whether students, scholars, or policy makers--who are rightly puzzled by the necessary troubles of life in complex societies."--Charles Lemert, Senior Fellow, Center for Comparative Research, Yale University; author and editor of Social Theory: the Multicultural, Global, and Classical Readings

About the Editors Francis T. Cullen is Distinguished Research Professor in the School of Criminal Justice at the University of Cincinnati. He is a Past President of both the American Society of Criminology and the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences. In 2010, he received ASC's Edwin H. Sutherland Award. Robert Agnew is Samuel Candler Dobbs Professor of Sociology in the Department of Sociology at Emory University. He is the inventor of the influential "general strain theory." He is a Past President of the American Society of Criminology. Pamela Wilcox is Professor in the School of Criminal Justice at the University of Cincinnati. She is noted for developing "multicontextual opportunity theory." Her recent publications include The Oxford Handbook of Criminological Theory.

This book covers the many theories for crime; such as, why some people commit crime, and why others don't. The chapters are not very long, which makes the reading and information easy to process. I like these fairly short chapters just for the fact that some of these theories are packed with information. Great read. I rented this book from , but now I wish I would have purchased it for a reference.

The book was in superb condition. A great read if one is interested in the psychological theories of crime. Sort of behavior analysis type foundation and it was very enlightening if one has an open mind and is willing to look at different aspects of things they already assume.

This book is required for my grad program and so far I actually really like it. It's format is unique and makes it easy reading and referencing. And the books physical structure is oddly pleasing, it sits well unlike some large books which are a bit tough to keep open for some reason.

This textbook is the bomb!!! The book is easy reading and the chapters are short; I am able to absorb the material. No headaches to conquer while studying crime!

Great introduction to the various theories regarding motivations for criminal behavior, as well as their respective merits and weaknesses.

It was very informative and got me an A in my class

format is unique but the information is a bit outdated

Perfect condition
