Rocking Chair Mystery (Amish Romance): Book 1

Synopsis

Sarah Blough and her mother were tending to their crafts when their quietness was disturbed by the arrival of a stranger. Sarah overhears her mother and the woman crying but when she approaches them, they distance themselves from her. All Sarah knows is that the woman's name is Maggie and she's dressed in English clothes. Sarah becomes very emotional at being excluded. It has always just been her and her mother, Betty. Sarah's father having died when she was a baby. Sarah is incensed at being treated like a child. But when she finds her mother dead the following morning and the stranger is gone with no clue as to her identity, Sarah is distraught. Unable to cope with the funeral arrangements and the fact her mother is dead and she is alone, Sarah is griefstricken and it is left to the Bishop's wife, Mrs. Shetler to come through. But when Jacob comes across Sarah sobbing, wondering what happened to her mother, he becomes dragged into Sarah's view that the stranger has had something to do with her mother's death. Sarah is convinced something bad has happened to her mother and she is determined to unravel the mystery. To Jacob's mind, there is no mystery. Quiet, unassuming Betty Blough died from a heart attack but when they find a portion of a burnt note is found in Betty's Bible, the mystery deepens. What was Betty Blough hiding?
